The article focuses on verbs that have entered the Bulgarian language during the first two decades of the 21st century. The aim of the study is to outline their place among all newly emerged words in the language, provide an overview of their current state, and draw conclusions about the latest trends. The analysis shows that verbs generally account for a relatively small proportion of all new words in Bulgarian, with a tendency for their share to decrease.

Keywords: new words; verbs; Bulgarian language; current trends
